HUMILITY

Those who have truly encountered God are filled with a sense of wonder at the mystery and, simultaneously, confounded by a sense of their own insignificance. Think of Moses before the burning bush, Isaiah swept into the presence of the all-glorious God, Jeremiah entrusted with a mission beyond his choosing.

Think of Simon Peter crying out, “Depart from me for I am a sinful man.” Or the centurion: “Lord I am not worthy.” Truly to have encountered the divine holiness makes us aware of our limitations and liabilities we carry.

This sense of littleness is what opens us up to be filled with the gifts of God, who looks with favor on the lowliness of his servants. God has turned his back on those who are wise and learned in their own sight and revealed the mystery to the little people: those who are not much in the sight of the world but who approach what is holy with awe and reverence.

Humility is not primarily a social virtue, the opposite of arrogance. It is the necessary consequence that follows an encounter with the loving holiness of God. After that it doesn’t matter much what status others assign to us.

Lord Jesus Christ, meek and humble of heart, teach us to recognize that we have nothing that we have not received. Teach us true gratitude, which encourages us to use your gifts in the service of others to the praise of your glory. For you are our Lord for ever and ever. Amen.
